THE ADVENTURES OF HUMANKIND

45' (GER)

Join the first hominids in their fascinating fight for survival.

About 4 million years ago the great adventure of humankind began in Africa: Ape-like creatures discover the advantages of walking upright and embark on a fascinating journey through evolution. We accompany the earliest hominids with lifelike CGIs in their struggle for survival.

We have never before been so close to these pre- and early humans, from the first attempts of the upright walking Ardipithecus Ramidus to modern man, who populates the whole world as a successful model of evolution. The world-renowned hominid researcher Friedemann Schrenk, palaeoanthropologist at the Senckenberg Research Institute, guides us through the widely ramified history of mankind, with its many dead ends and setbacks.
