EL SALVADOR – OF CRATERS AND COASTS

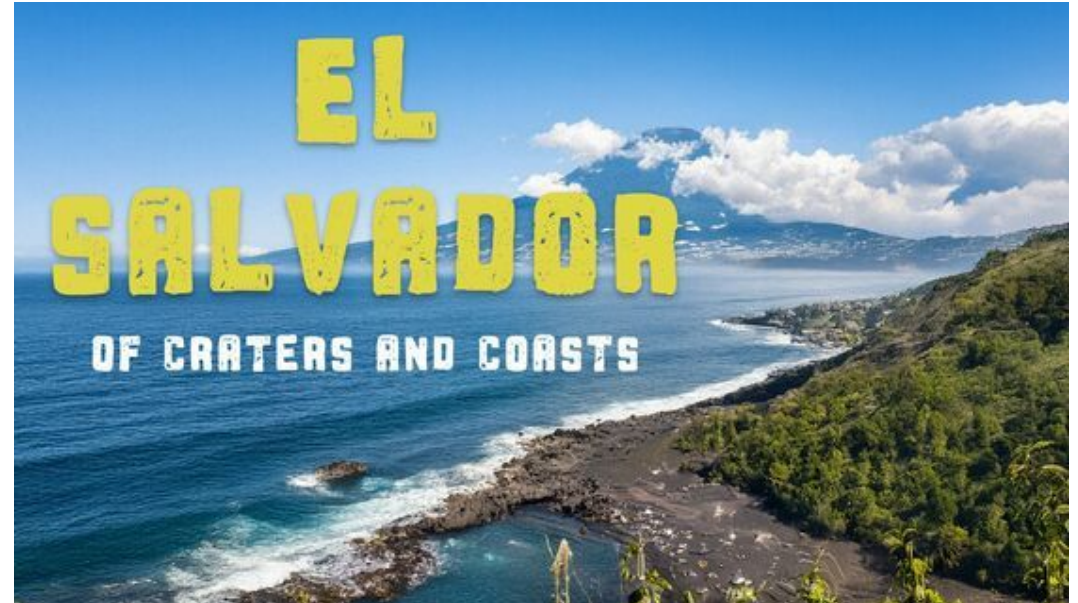

52' (ENG, GER)

El Salvador is the smallest country in Central America and its last secret natural and animal paradise.

The large national parks are home to uniquely green volcanic craters and turquoise-blue crater lakes rich in fish. From the north to the central plateau to the south, with its black coast and lava-formed coral reef, El Salvador is a true wildlife and natural discovery. Fantastic landscapes of savannas, forest-covered high mountains, cloud and rain forests and mangrove areas underline the diversity of this small country. The documentary shows how pumas are resettling in El Salvador, crocodiles lay eggs in the mangroves, the green sea turtle is observed in its reproduction and rattle snakes, spider monkeys and yellow-naped parrots find their natural habitats here.
